AUSTIN HIGH SCHOOL.

A Quasi-System of Higher Education Which is Higher Only in the Price Asked for It.

An Institution Which Will Have to Cut Off the "Eceteras" or go into Complete Bankruptcy.

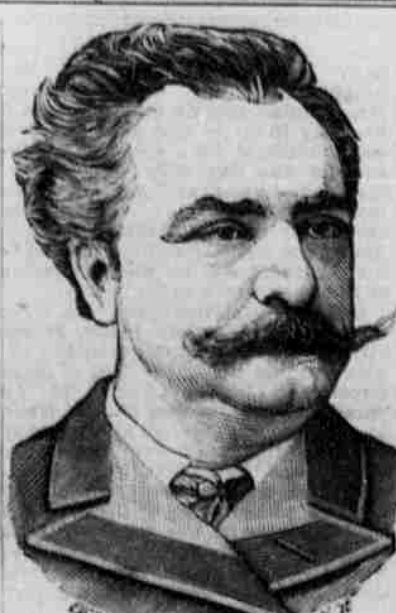

AUSTIN, TEX., March 12.—In his defense of the university management, published in THE GAZETTE of the 4th inst., Mr. Simpkins, regent, assumes that, as THE GAZETTE's Austin correspondent is a "very young man, who never attended a college or university," therefore he can know nothing about the affairs of such an institution. This is doubtless a very delicate hint to the 400,000 tax-payers in Texas, who, like THE GAZETTE's young man, lack the erudition conferred by university training, that in the presence of regental authority they should politely "hats off." With respect to himself, however, THE GAZETTE correspondent desires to state that Regent Simpkins commits a very serious and inexcusable blunder. Not only was he one of those immortal 219 to whom reference is made with such pardonable pride as now enjoying the practical results of regental wisdom, but he barely escaped becoming an effigy-burning kid by resignation a few days prior to the introduction of that branch of political science into the curriculum. In this connection, at the risk of appearing impertinent, the question is put to Regent Simpkins as to whether or not it is true, as claimed by the "vandals" that of eight regents only one or two have tasted the sweets of university education. In justification, however, of the superior wisdom assumed in the communication referred to, it is but just to Col. Simpkins to state that he is included in the bill of exceptions.

It may be, perhaps, it is, ignorance, and yet a great many people cannot see what this has to do with the question at issue, whether or not the regents have mismanaged their trust. It is a very common argument here with the defenders of the regents to charge ignorance and stupidity upon the part of those who question any feature of their actions. As one of these, THE GAZETTE's young man pleads guilty to the indictment; having acquired a little log-cabin arithmetic, he is unable by any system of mathematics, known to that outfit of education, to solve the financial problem suggested in the present condition of the university, but which such careful pains are taken to conceal. It is this: With an annual expenditure of about $100,000 and an annual income of $45,000, how can the university be long maintained without the official deceptation of a few regents whose names it would perhaps be impolite to mention here, or the bounding of several professors? If university education has demonstrated that individuals or even public institutions can spend $15,000 a year beyond their income and retain their financial integrity, it is indeed a blessing which should be widely disseminated. Unfortunately for the regents, the statistics show that, while starting out with $200,000, of which they spent not quite $100,000 on the building and equipment, the available balance is now only $65,000, giving a deficiency of $35,000 in a little over one and one-half session. The regents endeavor to shield themselves behind the university, and damn all who criticize them as "vandals," enemies of higher education and doodle-bug economists; yet it is a fact, which they cannot ignore, that unless some change is speedily accomplished, within three years the university must go into complete and hopeless bankruptcy. The collapse draws nearer every day, and the regents themselves realize it, as has been developed by some of their proceedings, yet they go on increasing expenditures with a recklessness unparalleled on Wall street. The matriculation last year was 219, this year it is only 265. Mr. Simpkins, of the figures mixed) and yet with an actual decrease in attendance the regents added five professors, giving a faculty of thirteen to teach an average attendance of about 169. Does anyone wonder at the growth of "vandalism"?

A great parade is made of the salaries paid by foreign universities. In one instance at least, they have been stated incorrectly. The university of Virginia only pays one professor $3500, and that is Dr. Mallett, who is neither in Philadelphia nor London as is intimated by Regent Simpkins but is holding his old position, from which he was called to Texas. But without investigating further the accuracy of the figures presented, it is better to go directly to the salient point; what are our own professors worth? Mind, you, this question of salaries was never raised by THE GAZETTE's correspondent. It was the number and not the salaries of professors to which he objected, but since the issue is pressed he will not dodge it. Can Regent Simpkins name a single member of the faculty, with one exception, who ever received over $1500 per annum before coming here? Is it not a fact that the occupants of two important chairs never held a position before in any university, or at least filled subordinate positions? In the entire faculty of thirteen, can Regent Simpkins name three that have held similar positions in other universities. Without naming words, all this talk about Johns Hopkins, Yale, Harvard and Vanderbilt is mere "gobberly-gosh," and originated with "a very young man," just graduated, but who was imported here at a salary of $4000 a year, because he happened to be a college chum of one of the powers behind the throne. Mr. Simpkins knows, and all the world knows, that the idea of measuring the faculty of the Texas university by Yale and Harvard would set the latter to laughing in their sleeves. In the academic department, beside the professors of ancient languages and mental and moral philosophy, there is not one that could not appropriate Gray's epitaph so eloquently dedicated to the country churchyard. Before leaving this question of salaries, it may be remarked that it is strange, passing strange, that the gentlemen especially alluded to here should devote so much time and ingenuity to the defense of the present management, if they could so easily obtain the same salaries elsewhere. It is singular that they should call the regents together by telegram, because of the introduction of the Penfield bill, and that they should, as is reported, furnish the morning paper here with such quantities of editorial matter in their own defense.

Mr. Simpkins is apparently ignorant of the cause of his resignation of Dr. Mallett. It is sufficient here to state that it was not on account of his salary, which was $500 more than he is receiving at present in the University of Virginia.

As to the cost of living, Mr. Simpkins simply errs when he states that board can be obtained at $12 per month. If he will name the place he will confer a lasting obligation upon the foreign portion of the students, who are now paying from $20 to $25. Those who are most economic say that their expenses fall but little below $500 a year.

It is a fact which may be interesting to the people of Texas, if not the regents, that one-half the students in the academic department are from Austin. Not 2 per cent. could meet the lowest standard required by any university for entrance and the others were simply admitted to "fill in" and make a display of numbers. As the regents themselves admit the school is nothing but a college, of which Austin gets the chief benefit. The present course of training is not above even if it equals that of a dozen colleges in the state that are run at one-half the expense. In other words, the state is furnishing Austin with a high school and because some people want to place a curb-chain on the expenditures for her benefit they are assailed as enemies of higher education. Another feature, that is entirely original with the regents, is the law department. Never before in any country were lawyers educated at the public expense. The Texas university without the law department would be like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet off on a picnic.

When the people located the literary department of the university they also voted a medical department at Galveston. That, it is safe to say, was esteemed of equal importance with the academic and even law departments. It is as necessary that the country should have good doctors as good lawyers and highly educated gentlemen of leisure. Yet instead of accumulating a reserve fund for the establishment of this department, the regents are rapidly sinking the cash balance, and every day but makes more evident the fact that the medical branch located by the people is but a myth and a delusion, which can never have any actual existence.

Regent Simpkins chooses to ignore all reference to the personal expenses of the regents, and leaves unanswered the question as to where the authority was obtained to charge $5 per day for their services, when the law only allows actual expenses. These, together with the "eceteras" and "carriage hire," will go down to posterity along with the man with the iron mask and the author of "Beautiful Snow," as involved in insoluble mystery. No doubt it is assumed, and correctly too, that the lack of university education would effectually prevent a proper understanding of them.

The regents are endeavoring to trench themselves behind the breastworks of higher education; but the fact remains that the education they have established is higher alone in price. They have tried to intimidate legislation by declaring that the money expended did not belong to the state and therefore the legislature was interfering where it had no jurisdiction. By denunciation and bull-dozing they have attempted to discredit the statements of all who criticized their management. But nevertheless the facts are coming out and by their own records let them be judged by the public.

LOVED BUT DISOWNED.

The Paramour of an Ex-Boston Divine Out of Funds.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Mrs. Dr. E. S. Hudson was arraigned to-day, charged with swindling the proprietor of the Coleman house, Boston, out of $23 for board and lodging. She pleaded "not guilty," and declared that she had never swindled any person in Boston. She said she merely got into debt and did not go into bankruptcy because she had not the means to do so. She was held on bail for trial. In her rooms were found a trunk full of letters from Rev. J. B. Drysdale, now pastor of a church in Williamsburg, and formerly rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Boston. These letters are full of endearing expressions, and thanks for money and presents and requests to burn the letters. He also talks about consultations with fortune-tellers and his troubles in the Boston church. Mr. Drysdale denies that she has any claim on him, whereas she claims that he was on terms of intimacy with her in Boston.
